What is the Maryland Grazers' Network?
A Free Resource for Grazers

“Grass-Fed “ “pasture-
raised”, “grass
-finished-

These are all phrases that are appearing more frequently in the agricultural press and at producer meetings. This type of livestock production utilizes specific grazing practices to be profitable and environmental sound. But, how can farmers learn the techniques of managed grazing and environmental practices to gain the benefits of these practices?

The Maryland Grazers Network links together pairs of farmers— an experienced livestock or dairy grazers with a farmer wanting to either begin or improve his/her existing grazing systems (grazer partners). Mentors receive strong support from research and field experts in pasture management, fencing and watering systems, and can bring this expertise in to help farmer partners where needed.

The project also provides an opportunity for farmers to improve their marketing skills or start a direct marketing operation by working with a farmer mentor already taking advantage of the growing consumer interest in grass based beef and dairy products.

Why Should I Participate as a Grazer Partner?

The Grazers' Network is an excellent opportunity to learn from season veteran grazers. Funding from the project compensates the mentors for their time spent helping a Grazer Partner develop grazing and marketing systems. It provides an excellent opportunity to:

$$ Improving the your bottom line $$

Learn new or improved practices /systems/marketing skills that can benefit your farm financially. Receive professional and confidential financial business analysis. Discover channels for cost-sharing and leveraged resource opportunities for new projects. Grazing and water quality – Improving your pastures will not only improve your bottom line $, but also help improve water quality in nearby streams. Marketing – Selling is not marketing. Whatever your grass based product, network mentors and advisors give you the benefit of a wide variety of resources and real world experiences to develop a sound plan.

It's an enjoyable way to learn. Mentors provide a relaxed and individualized training and sharing experience.
